Most students accepted into the program have a degree from a recognized university. The minimum requirement to enter our JD program is two full years (60 credit units) of academic work at a recognized university, or the equivalent of such work. Applicants must also submit a Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) score and a personal statement (maximum of 500 words).

Admission to the College of Law is at the discretion of the Admissions Committee of the college. In exercising its discretion, the committee considers academic background and LSAT score, and gives a slight preference to applicants with a Saskatchewan connection or residents of the Yukon, Northwest and Nunavut Territories, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland and Labrador (these being provinces or territories with no law college).

Approximately 126 students are accepted into the College of Law’s first year program at the University of Saskatchewan each academic year. However, the number of applications we receive greatly exceeds the number of places available. Admission is determined based on merit, taking into account your academic record, your Law School Admission Test (LSAT) score, and any special circumstances. Past experience indicates that, as a general rule, successful applicants have a grade point average of 3.7 or better on a 4.3 point scale (approximately a B+ or 80% average) in pre-law studies, and score 159 or higher on the LSAT.
